

ANTONY GORMLEY

CINCH, BURLINGTON ARCADE, LONDON

CINCH, the artist's first work in solid stainless steel, will be on view on the northern facade of London's iconic Burlington Arcade from 2 March 2017.

In the work, space is displaced by a mass made up of refractory cells of hard material that engages the sky and its changing light. Rather than the known identities of individuals like those memorialised on the façade of the nearby Burlington House, this work is open to interpretation and conveys the idea of a human as a work in progress.
